Horological Machine 6 in Titanium by MB&F (this page) and Quadruple Tourbillon by Greubel Forsey (opposite page)

Wristwatches are not for telling the time, any mobile phone can do that. The rarified work of true haute horologists is concerned with the mastery of minute engineering, bringing technical innovation into ever-smaller packages. Both MB&F and Greubel Forsey shift perceptions of what a watch can be: whether that is fitting four tourbillons into a space where populist brands reach their peak at one or crafting a timepiece that looks more like a machine from another time. Fast forward, and step into the future. $275,237 and $1,039,722 respectively www.marcuswatches.com
